Isle of Man launches Chartered Manager Support Scheme

Over 40 local managers attended a seminar held at The Isle of Man International Business School on becoming a Chartered Manager. The seminar was organised by the Manx Centre for Management Development (MCMD) the accredited centre for CMI programmes on the Island.

The main speaker at the seminar was Andrew Cairns, the Islands' first Chartered Manager who gave an insightful briefing on how to achieve Chartered status, how his career had been enriched by the process of becoming Chartered as well as providing first hand advice to those who were considering taking the 'Chartered' route.

Although small, the Isle of Man already boasts  Chartered Managers. However, the logistics of living on an island make it hard for local managers to attend the briefing sessions held in London. With the support of MCMD it is hoped that many more members will be able to become chartered. As well as providing a platform for networking and support, MCMD is intending to run a series of accredited CPD sessions at The International Business School that will contribute to the number of CPD hours members need to undertake in order to achieve chartered status.

MCMD is the first accredited CMI centre in the UK to offer this level of support for the Chartered Manager Scheme which will run in addition to the CMI distance support programme.

Centre Manager, Jean Lloyd Williams was delighted by the response to the seminar;

“It is very exciting that the demand to take this initiative forward is so strong. Not only is this a positive step forward for the Institute, but also a reflection of the high quality of management you can expect on the Isle of Man. We are currently undertaking research into the CPD requirements of the Islands' potential chartered managers to ensure we provide them with the access to the appropriate training.”
