Professor Perks becomes IBS Visiting Professor

The IBS is delighted to announce that Professor Robert Perks has accepted an invitation to become a 'Visiting Professor' of the school.

Professor Robert Perks currently teaches Undergraduate Financial Accounting, Management Accounting as well as Financial Statement Analysis (Msc) and Managing Finance (MBA).

Professor Perks has extensive lecturing experience and has run the Accountancy Department as a Professor at a number of well respected higher education institutions including Queens University, Belfast, Aberdeen University and Birkbeck College. Prior to his academic career, professor Perks trained as an accountant with Marconi before going to become Assistant Head of Financial Accounting at British Rail (Western Region) and Management Accountant with the Abbey National Building Society.

Professor Perks' experience of working within commercial organisations combined with his excellent academic record make his appointment at Visiting Professor a development of which the IBS is very proud.

Professor Perks commented,

"I have a passion for making accountancy interesting and aim to excite students by introducing them to real-world accountancy. During the course we study real life examples of annual reports and accounts which help to bring the subject to life."

Professor Perks is extremely well published. He has written over 50 articles and his third text book is due for publication in August 2006.
